Tinnitus Re-training therapy: What it is and how it works

Dr. Miller began Doctors Hearing Care because she believed people in the Southern Indiana/Greater Louisville area needed a hearing health professional who would address their comprehensive hearing health — not just dispense hearing aids.

Dr. Miller is a staunch advocate for early treatment of hearing loss in adults and annual testing for those over the age of 50. Dr. Miller has devoted herself for many years to treating not just adults but hearing-impaired children as well. She began her career at Kosair Children's Hospital in Louisville and currently provides special needs services for the Indiana Early Intervention Program for children.

Dr. Miller earned her Doctor of Audiology degree from the University of Florida. She serves as the chapter advisor for the HLAA Kentuckiana Chapter and is a clinical supervisor for the University of Louisville doctor of audiology program. She is a fellow of the American Academy of Audiology and is board certified by the American Board of Audiology.

Dr. Miller's hobbies include hunting, scuba diving, and traveling. She is a lifelong resident of Southern Indiana and has two grown sons, Nick and Nelson. Her dog, Stellar, is a "snorkie," which is a mix of miniature schnauzer and Yorkie. She loves swimming in the pool, and she goes to work with Dr. Miller every day and enjoys visiting with patients!

Dr. Lauren Brenneman joined the Doctors Hearing Care team in January 2016 as a doctoral candidate from the University of Louisville. She received her Bachelor of Science in communication disorders from the University of Kentucky in 2013 and her Doctorate of Audiology from the University of Louisville in 2017. She was drawn to a career in audiology because she believes helping others communicate with their loved ones provides a better quality of life.

Dr. Brenneman practices comprehensive patient-centered audiologic care for both pediatric and adult patients. She specialized in the management of tinnitus and other sound sensitivity disorders; she is one of the few audiologists to have completed supplemental coursework in tinnitus retraining therapy. Her training was under the neuroscientist who developed this therapy approach.

Dr. Brenneman was born and raised in southern Ohio and moved to Kentucky for college after graduating high school. While at UK, she fell in love with the southern charm of Kentucky and made Louisville her home. Of course, as a UK graduate, Dr. Brenneman is a die-hard Wildcats fan and believes basketball season is the best time of the year! She is also a self-proclaimed foodie and dog lover. She enjoys all things related to food: baking, cooking, and exploring the diverse food culture Louisville has to offer. She is a dog mom to two adorable pups with giant personalities, Benson and Jackson.
