Inclusion of Communication Partners in Communication Management

Family-centered care highlights collaboration and open communication between the patient, hearing healthcare provider, and the family. Social support from communication partners can impact the care of the individual with hearing loss. Thus, involving others in your hearing healthcare is important. Dr. Heacock will discuss her research relating to family centered care. Learn about the goals of family centered care and review communication strategies to assist with everyday communication management. Feel free to invite a communication partner to the meeting!

Raquel Heacock, AuD, F-AAA, CCC-A

Dr. Raquel Heacock obtained her B.S. in Education from the University of Louisville and also received her doctorate in audiology from University of Louisville, School of Medicine. Dr. Heacock is a Louisville native and graduated from Christian Academy of Louisville. She is currently a clinical audiologist at KY Hearing Clinic. She is passionate about educating others about the emotional and cognitive implications of hearing loss and the importance of including family members in the communication management process. When not working, Dr. Heacock enjoys adventures both big and small with her family and her two dogs and maintaining active involvement with her church.
